Work at Home Affiliate Marketing

It seems that the biggest dream any entrepreneur has is to work at home making a living right from their living room - their commute consisting of stopping by the kitchen to pick up a cup of coffee. While this seems ideal, there are many things to consider before cutting all ties and making a break from the 9-5 grind.

Take the time to research what you will sell. While you might be interested in selling Canadian sweet grass baskets, there may be no market for it. It just makes sense, at least at first to find an already busy money making niche, like weight loss or “how to get a hot date” because that’s where there is always a regular “starving” market ready to spend cash.

Any person new to making money at home should consider affiliate marketing. There are so many fabulous high commission products for marketers to sell. With the choice of digital downloads or tangibles, the field is wide open.

Want to sell treadmills? Put up a review site that offers good, solid information of what to look for, brands, pros and cons, etc... all while promoting something from Amazon.com or some other affiliate program.

Have you always wanted to sell your favorite vitamins and herb supplements? Here’s your chance to get into a multi-billion dollar health industry by using affiliate marketing as your money making medium.

Don’t be put off by the many others already out there. For the person with a good work ethic and determination, you can live your dream, while you work at home, with affiliate marketing.

How to Make Money Online with Affiliate Marketing

Of all the ways for both newbies and seasoned marketers to make money online, affiliate marketing is probably the most often used. It gives the marketer the opportunity to focus his or her energies just on the marketing aspect of the sales funnel.

After all, the hardest part of starting a business online is to develop a great product with sizzling sales copy – elements already taken care of when you’re promoting affiliate products. With these two milestones taken care of, your energy can be focused on driving traffic to the affiliate sales site.

Think of it this way: someone writes a great product that teaches specialty dog training - but then doesn’t know how to reach his or her audience. On the other hand, you know that there is a huge market for specialty dog training, and you know how to generate traffic to a site, but you have no personal knowledge of the dog training niche.

Enter affiliate marketing. You do what you do best – market and drive traffic. In this way, you become a traffic driving expert rather than an infopreneur that sells a dog training course.

At the same time, it helps the owner of the dog training product because they would rather write and teach dog training tips than have to find ways to research hot keywords or write articles.

Affiliate marketing is a perfect opportunity to help immerse you into the world of Internet marketing. While there are many dozens of ways to make money online, affiliate marketing definitely offers the most flexibility and variety for the serious online entrepreneur.

Do You Have What It Takes to Be an Internet Affiliate?

If you were to describe an Internet affiliate, what would they look like? They look like you! Male or female, any race, any nationality, any age – the main thing that makes someone an affiliate marketer is having a hunger to make a success of whatever it is that they touch.

An affiliate loves to market to people's needs! An affiliate marketer often takes on one project after another as they accomplish what they had hoped in each separate project. Like climbing a new peak, a marketer takes on the challenge of digging up keywords and feeling out the audience for which the product is intended.

Unlike the businessperson who loves to focus on one niche and become the authority on that topic, an affiliate marketer is constantly looking for the next great program to promote and dominate.

Is just anyone cut out to be an affiliate marketer? In all honesty, no. Anyone can become an affiliate, but only some will stay with it long enough to make a real go of it. It takes grit, determination, creativity, bloodhound instincts, and love of a challenge.

You'll also have to learn some technical tactics to ensure your promotions see the volume of traffic that's required to generate a decent stay at home income over a long period of time. You'll want to build a list of subscribers, learn about getting your pages on page 1 of the Google search results, and possibly discover how to operate a pay per click ad campaign.

In the end, marketing of any kind is all about discerning people's hot buttons and then pushing them. If that describes you, then by all means you can count yourself in the small, but growing class of entrepreneur called affiliate marketers.

And for the person who doesn't have the talent to write the perfect infoproduct or can't supply tangibles like herbs and vitamins, affiliate marketing becomes the obvious answer.

Do you have a knack for finding a product that really fills a need? Why not find a way to promote it with a website or Squidoo lens? You really just need to pay attention to the "buying" keyword phrases and make sure to include them in your article titles and/or pay per click campaigns and it's only a matter of time before the traffic finds your page.

Affiliate Marketing: 3 Easy Shortcuts to Find a Hot Niche

Want to know how to make money online with affiliate marketing? Here are 3 ways to slash your affiliate marketing research efforts to the bare minimum so that you can get on to the fun of promoting and marketing.

You make sure you become a helpful contributor and then note which affiliate products can best serve those people.

Head to your favorite bookstore and notice the most popular magazines. If advertisers are spending money on ads, enough to support at least one magazine, then you know there's a market for an affiliate product in that same niche.

These are just some of the simpler ways to get in the head of your market. Do you enjoy digging into the minds of potential customers to find what wants, needs or desires they have? Then affiliate marketing may be just what you want to make money from home!

There are two parts to a sales funnel: a good product and a marketing plan leading up to it. With affiliate marketing, you don't have to create a product – it's done for you, along with the sales copy – you just have to find it. But you have tons of traffic and list building tasks to do.

Become a student of your niche. Spy on them in the forums. Pay attention to their burning questions - especially the ones that keep cropping up. Join those forums and contribute good, solid advice. Get a reputation as someone who is an authority but is generous at the same time.

Then you can point consumers to your squeeze page or a blog, where you discuss the subject at hand in depth. Of course, you offer the affiliate product there, too. But you give tons of value in exchange for that traffic.

Triple Your Success Rate By Finding a Well Planned Affiliate Marketing Program

Finding a good affiliate marketing program can be the closest thing to plug and play business in Internet marketing. Think about it this way, not only do you have a great product and sales letter, but the very well planned programs are jammed with ready-to-go support materials.

These can include banner ads of all shapes and sizes, text links, ready-to-go emails, blog posts, and even a short report that the affiliate can use as a freebie incentive for auto responder sign-ups. You can certainly make your own, but why do that if you can find a set up already to go?

It pays to look into the affiliate programs simply because a good one saves you time not having to design and write all of the promotional materials. Even the blog posts just need to be tweaked a bit to make them different from others like them.

Aside from that, many top product owners run contests between affiliates just to make it interesting. These incentives can range from gift certificates to actual gifts like computer software or even flat screen TVs.

To find out if a certain product has an affiliate program, you do one of three things: look for a link either at the top or at the very bottom of the page that says "affiliates" or "partners" and click. Or you can type into Google "the name of the product + affiliate program" and if there is an affiliate program it should return near the top of the list. And of course, check out places like ClickBank or PayDotCom to see if it's listed.

It will save you time and money in the end if you take the time to look for a strong affiliate marketing program.

Transforming Your Business Plans with Affiliate Marketing Money Strategies

It's often said that affiliate marketing money is some of the easiest money to be made and in many ways, that's true. Think about it this way: you already have an eBook, videos, or software that caters to a market that's spending money online already. A well written sales letter actually gives you all of the inspiration you need to write up your own ads - even if there isn't a well developed affiliate program.

For example, you can write up a hot report to give away as a freebie to encourage consumers to sign up to your autoresponder list. How do you come up with the topic and subtopics for this free eBook?

Choose something that complements the original product nicely. For instance, if it's a diet nutritional eBook, then a short report on exercise would work well, and you can hyperlink to the diet guide inside the free report.

Learn your niche's problems. Find out what issues they're having by paying attention to the biggest questions that keep cropping up on the discussion boards. Make sure to answer those questions in your short report and lead them to buy the main report as the source for answers in that niche.

Affiliate marketing money doesn't grow on trees, but it comes awfully close. As long as you have the perfect combination of a well written product, a strong sales letter, and tools to drive targeted traffic to your site, you'll be able to set your income on autopilot in a short amount of time.
